OUR 77TH YEAR, NO.39

It's official!

A CROWD of about 2,000 people attended Sunday's ceremonies on Cannery Row, according to a Monterey Police department estimate.

Sanctuary celebration a glorious moment

By TERRY FLORES

AS INTERMITTENT rays of the Sunday afternoon sun penetrated an ever-familiar, silvery-white fog, a crowd of nearly 2,000 people gathered around the stage elevated over San Carlos Beach on Cannery Row.

The ceremonies on Sept. 20 that would formally seal the Monterey Bay's place in history as a national marine sanctuary had begun.

Monterey County Supervisor Karin

Strasser Kauffman, Assemblyman Sam Farr and Sen. Henry Mello congratulated all who were involved in the 15-year effort to finally bring the sanctuary to fruition. But it was Congressman Leon Panetta for whom dignitaries, residents and visitors alike would give a standing ovation. County Planning Commissioner Jo Stallard, Pacific Grove Mayor Flo Schaefer, Councilwoman Eleanor Rogge and Councilman Bud Nunn looked on with admiration.

"Our history reflects the dependence of us on our bay and our coastline," said the congressman whose own father was a fisherman. "Certainly all of us understand that life is sustained by the sea and this area of the California Coast draws its very life from the bay."

With the assistance of a determined group of both local and state governments, environmentalists, scientists and fishermen, the congressman four years ago successfully pushed through a bill that forced the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to reconsider authorizing its federal sanctuary program. The efforts in bringing forth the legislation eventually created enough momentum to make the Monterey Bay Sanctuary a possibility.

No more oil drilling

Before Panetta's bill was passed, however, the California coastline had been threatened with potential oil drilling ventures in a series of federal lease sale proposals that were pending.

Exclusive! Sand castle contest Oct. 3

ALL MADNESS should have its proper time and place. And for the 32nd Annual Great Sand Castle Contest, they are: Saturday, Oct. 3; and Carmel Beach.

The judging begins at noon, so all architects who work in the grainy medium should arrive well before that.

Organizers have preferred to announce the event's date at the last minute to keep the event as local as possible.

As usual, a number of awards will be conferred on the most creative sand castle artists.

Informed sources indicate judges will be susceptible to bribes — and their decisions will be "arbitrary and final."

Amid budget crisis, council seeks to save recreation dept.

By PAUL WOLF

FACING A budget that takes "drastic measures," the Carmel City Council made a last-ditch effort to spare the recreation department from receiving the ax.

Toward the end of a three-hour budget session Tuesday afternoon, the council voted 3-2 to do its best to prevent the department's dissolution.

The matter will be decided next Tuesday, at a meeting that begins at 3:30 p.m. at city hall.

The subject of the recreation department was in the context of a tentative $7.3 million 1992-93 budget, which proposes the elimination of the department's two full-time employees and array of programs and services.

The sentiment among the majority of council members and speakers at the public hearing could be summed up as follows: "This isn't just a cut we are talking about; this is a whole department."

Council members are hoping to find a way to save the six-year-old department. "I'm willing to keep this alive for another week," said Councilwoman Barbara Brooks, who joined Mayor Ken White and Councilman Bob Fischer in supporting the reduction of the department to one employee. Council members Barbara Livingston and Phil Coniglio voted no.

Brooks, declaring that "this is rock-and-a-hard place time," was hinting at how tenuous the council's decision was. When the council reconvenes next Tuesday for a final vote, members will consider the yet further cut or cuts needed to save the department.

The commitment to the recreation programs did not end hard choices; merely it began them.

City administration recommended discontinuing recreation to save $45,000 for the remainder of the current fiscal year, and $85,000 for 1993-94.

It was the final item in a long list of cuts that city staff proposed as necessary measures for balancing the budget — a budget that creates a picture of grim fiscal realities.

The package, which D'Ambrosio characterized as "taking drastic measures," calls for many employee reductions, some juggling of funds, and a continued bare-

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

The mayor's corner

Editor's note: It has been a long-standing policy of The Carmel Pine Cone to offer space on its editorial page for the incumbent mayor to express his, or her, viewpoint on city matters. This invitation was extended to Mayor Ken White soon after his election in April. This is his first appearance.

By KEN WHITE

I HAVE BEEN mayor of this beautiful community for five months. I am writing to express my thinking about the public debate, including criticisms, finger-pointing, name-calling and half truths, that have commanded so much attention in recent weeks. I recognize that this exercise of free speech is a reflection of concerns of our citizens and the press about the future of our town. I welcome and believe in public discourse.

Nonetheless, I regret that the tone and fury have distracted us from more deserved attention to the real problems and their potential solutions.

Accepting the reality of this debate and the degree to which I have been drawn into it by recent editorials in The Carmel Pine Cone, it seems to me to be my duty as mayor to respond.

I continue to meet with individuals and groups regularly, and because I have made it known that I always want to talk and think together to avoid misunderstandings and to promote mutual trust and respect, I must tell you that I was disappointed that the Carmel Citizens for Good Government sent its recently published letter to The Carmel Pine Cone before they made any effort to meet and talk with me. As a matter of fact, I received a phone call from a Pine Cone reporter asking for my response to the letter before I had had a chance to read it.

Much to agree with

Now that I have considered the Carmel Citizens for Good Government letter, I wish to respond by saying that I find much to agree with — but equally I wish to emphasize that the tone of the letter and its inherent element of personal attack reflect a regrettable effort to seek confrontation.

The Carmel Citizens for Good Government has every right to find fault and to make recommendations. What they offer will be given thoughtful consideration. My point is that an open dialogue, an effort to take concerns directly to the individuals involved would be a far preferable way of making progress. Again, I believe that confrontation, with resulting emotions, creates distraction rather than a climate of mutual trust and cooperation.

Membership question

The cause of the recent consternation appears to be the issue of who is a member of what organization. The Carmel Residents Association has been the focus of criticism. To remove this issue from further debate, I believe we should accept the judgment of the city attorney — that a person's membership in this or that community group is not an appropriate criterion for determining a person's suitability or qualification for a city appointment.

Having noted that legal opinion, I want to add my personal thinking on the subject. During last April's election campaign, my membership in a variety of community organizations was forthrightly presented. I believed then, as I do now, that such memberships offer a useful and proper means for a mayor and for council members to keep in touch with the many segments of our community. I have tried hard, and will continue to try, to obtain as many points of view as possible in order that I may make balanced and fair decisions.

We have all heard the rule that attacks and criticisms must be answered, even countered, otherwise those attacks will be assumed to have merit. Therefore, I must respond to the editorial of Sept. 17 wherein it is alleged that during my five months as mayor I have "stood at the shoulder of the road," failing to provide leadership in these times of critical challenge and change.

Evidence

I take this opportunity to make public my appointments calendar. Listed below is evidence of the value/outcome of many of those meetings:

1. Re-energized the Landlord-Tenant Committee
2. Scheduled a joint Council-2016

Fischer, Coniglio keep distance from CCGG

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE THE Carmel Citizens for Good Government named its foes last week with a frontal attack on Mayor Ken White, Barbara Brooks and Barbara Livingston, that did not mean it established strong allies in the two council members it did not target.

"We used to have one bully in town; now we have two," said Councilman Bob Fischer, who described himself as feeling "very badly" about the political warring taking place.

Councilman Phil Coniglio, agreeing the CCGG has made "a lot of valid points," had a more mixed reaction than Fischer.

The highly critical five-page CCGG letter, which included hints at an impending recall movement against the council's majority, made no secret of the group's support for Fischer and Councilman Phil Coniglio.

That fact was clear by omission: The letter was addressed to White, Brooks and Livingston — even though the whole council was being called upon to endorse the group's get-the-city-on-course six-point plan, spelled out in the letter.

Made public Sept. 15, the paper was called "Restore the Heart of Carmel," and it criticized the management of municipal affairs as handled both currently and in the recent past.

It singled out the three for poor decision-making, "abuse of power" and lack of "civility" toward their two colleagues, among a number of other criticisms.

But in characterizing the three as "tacitly" endorsing the planks and tactics of the Carmel Residents Association — of which the three are members — the letter was establishing a kind of partisanship with Fischer and Coniglio.

Both council members have been critical of the CRA. And they have recently been subject to CRA animosity after they rejected a planning commission nominee Louis Rolle primarily because he belongs to the residents' group.

"I don't like to see people attack one another," Fischer said. "True, we don't see eye to eye, but we have had a polite relationship."

Fischer was responding to the CCGG letters call for three councilmembers to shape up their behavior around Fischer and Coniglio. "I wasn't aware I didn't get along with Barbara Brooks and Barbara Livingston until that paper came out," said Fischer.

About the hint at a recall movement, he added: "People should just do things; they shouldn't make threats."

Coniglio, while saying "I won't take sides," stressed that it was the CRA that made a threat of a law suit toward him and Fischer. Thus his sympathy was limited. "I know what it's like to be singled out," he said. "I've been through it."

In his mixed response, Coniglio said, "I don't want to say that I am endorsing this group, but I do think they have made a lot of valid points."

Birders, 'twitchers' — by any name, they like birds

SO PROCLAIMS September's The Sanderling, the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society newsletter, which made a splash about the sighting of a broad-winged tropical bird.

The cover story speculates on how "warm El Niño waters" may have prompted the rare visit. Pacific Grove's Don Roberson, author of three books on birds, was summoned to lend confirmation to Most birders have multiple identities — adventurer, scientist (even if strictly amateur), hobbyist and, naturally, nature-lover. The depth of interest varies with each of them. For every one person who will travel to New Guinea to view the island's Birds of Paradise, there are probably several whose attention never journeys beyond the backyard.

As the Sanderling article suggests, birding starts with some basic goals — like seeing something the community so far hasn't. Another one is trying to lodge a new name in your "life list."

Often, some genuine contributions are made by birders to science in general, ornithology in particular, according to Roberson.

When Roberson — lawyer by vocation, birder by avocation — telephoned other birders, they travelled from as far as San Diego and San Francisco to get their own glimpses. His photograph wound up on the cover of the newsletter.

"There is no right way to watch birds," said Roberson, whose approach is more like the ardent hobbyist's than the mystic's. "Why does anybody get interested in a particular challenge?" the Audubon treasure asked. "Everyone has a different reason."

If Roberson is master, Carmel's Noel Van Bibber is more like journeyman.

Council to study early debt payment on Rio Park

AS THE city considers paying down the Rio Park acquisition debt by $500,000 to reduce interest payments, the community is starting to accept the prospect of a delay in the park's development.

The delay would be a necessary part of the city's pay-down plan, since the $500,000 would come from a restricted fund earmarked for the development of a ball park and other facilities.

"The city fathers and mothers are facing a difficult budget situation," said Howard Skidmore, a member of the two-and-a-half-year-old Rio Park planning committee. "The dollar comes first right now. We just have to wait."

Similarly, committee member Michael Waxer recognized the group planned for "the best and highest use" of Rio Park, "and we knew all along that a number of items in the plan may not have funding right away."

No one has said publicly how long they believe the delay would be. The special development fund was established as

School may be open, but dogs are not welcome

By SCOTT BREARTON

PARENTS AND administrators are asking area residents to refrain from walking their dogs on school grounds this year for health and safety reasons.

The Carmel River School PTA issued a newsletter Sept. 2 detailing their "no dog policy" with the hope of encouraging dog owners to take their animals anywhere but River School to relieve themselves.

The newsletter states that dog feces and urine pose a significant health risk, not to mention being unsightly and stinky. According to parent Janet Myer, the safety risks of dog bites is also a concern for many parents. Myer says a child was bitten after school last year by a resident's dog.

Parent volunteers will be monitoring school grounds from 4-7 p.m. daily in an effort to reeducate and remind dog owners of the school's no dog policy.

Parents have enlisted the help of the Monterey County Sheriff's Department and Animal Control who will be issuing citations to repeat violators. A county ordinance prohibits leaving an animal, whether attended or unattended, on the grounds of any public school, according to Myer.

Carmel River School PTA asks for the cooperation of the community with the hope that the extra effort will help create a safer, more pleasant campus for children.

Pine Cone staffer receives ad design award

LAURA HAMILTON, advertising designer for The Carmel Pine Cone, has received a Dynamic Graphics design award for her work on the April, 1992 special 'Art and Antiques' supplement.

The annual insert featured text and clip art integrated by Hamilton into the cover design. This is the eighth such award Hamilton has received in her 10 years with The Carmel Pine Cone.

Hamilton's award was announced in Clip Bits, a Dynamic Graphics, Inc. publication. Each year the company awards graphic designers who utilize its clip art to achieve outstanding results.

Said Hamilton: "Using just one color," Hamilton said, "I found the texture art a great solution to the problem of how and where to put color. I really enjoy what I do. I never get tired of creating newer and better ad designs for the newspaper."

Police Beat

Without bank photo, police track bank robbery suspects

THE CARMEL Police officials were disappointed they were unable to obtain a freeze-frame image from the Wells Fargo Bank robbery that took place Sept. 12.

But police indicated progress is being made in the investigation, as they are now on the trail of "two or three suspects mentioned by law enforcement of by citizens," said Carmel Detective Pete Poitras. He would disclose only that "the timing was off" between a bank employee's activating a certain surveillance device and the robbery's fleeing the building.

Hence no image in hand. "It would have helped us a lot," said Poitras. "It (bank photographs) are good investigative tool."

So the CPD will have to proceed without one. Of the suspects, Poitras said, "We are in the process of ruling them in or out."

Police obtained a detailed description of the bank robber, who was reported as Oriental or Phillippino, a young adult with a pockmarked complexion and hornrinned glasses.

The incident occurred at about 2:04 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 12. The culprit approached a teller with a note, indicated a concealed weapon under his clothing, and left with an undisclosed amount of money.

It was the third bank robbery in Carmel in eight months. The first two incidents led to arrests.

Mysterious burglary

In all, the past weeks has been quiet for major crime categories.

There was only one notable incident, a report Monday, Sept. 21, of a burglary — "a small amount of cash" taken from a doctor's office at Monterey Verde and Seventh Avenue, on the north-east corner.

The means of entry hasn't been determined, according to Poitras. The detective said the department is working on the hunch that the culprit made entry from above, through a skylight.

LAST SPRING, then-mayoral candidate Ken White had big hopes for Rio Park. Now, it appears the plans will not become reality in the near future.

Rio Park debt payment

part of the 1990 bond purchase arrangement for the land, then known as the Hodges property.

The five-member council, wearing its hat as Public Improvement Authority, decided there was merit to the proposal of reducing annual payments by as much as $40,000 annually over the next 17 years — even if that meant an indefinite delay in the development of recreation facilities on Rio Park.

The city bought Hodges property by borrowing 2.4 million via council approved certificates of participation. Nearly $500,000 was set aside for development in a restricted reserve account.

Sandi Davenport, city financial services director, said the paying down plan is legal; thus the question surrounds the scheduling of such payment.

Concerned trustee

Meanwhile, one of the trustees with the Hodges property told The Carmel Pine Cone he believes the city is running up against a legal wall. "Whether or not this is a good idea to do this (paying down the debt), it is not an option to do this, in my opinion," said Bob Smith, who lives in Reno, Nev.

Smith cited passages from documents filed with the city's COP agreements, the state's Debt Advisory Commission and a trust company. The passages suggested the property must be used for recreation facilities and its development for recreation must be completed in a timely fashion.

Smith also believes the city is overestimating the amount of savings it would achieve through the pay down.

Carmel Mayor Ken White, in an interview before the meeting, said there remains a number of open questions: Would the city have to reduce the scale of its Rio Park plans in response to the city's current budget difficulties? How much of a delay is in order? Are there other money sources within the community that could contribute toward a recreation park without the city providing all the funding.

While understanding about the need to delay the development of Rio Park, another committee member, Karl Pallastrini, had one concern — that the issue of Rio Park would simply be let go indefinitely: "I want to know when it (the development) might happen. I'd like to know what the plan is. We need a provision or time table."

To date, roughly $44,000 have been put into the design, which has already received final approval.

Van Bibber and bird watching

For starters, he began watching birds only three and a half years ago, a small portion of his 71 years. He began by taking a class at the PG Adult School.

As there are different goals for different bird enthusiasts, there are varying styles: Where Roberson moves fast — with his rush to gather data — Van Bibber just creeps along.

For him, the end is the process itself, and the goal just to keep going. Yet without rushing, Van Bibber's life list has grown to 297 species. Considering that there are 180 birds that nest in the county, he's obviously taken his pursuit outside the area at least on occasion.

"A really serious birder will travel to Australia to see one bird," said Van Bibber about the twitcher concept.

He and wife Rita once took out a full half day to pick through the foliage of Cave Creek Canyon, Ariz., in search of an Elegant Trogon, a noble orange breasted, black-and-green headed Mexican bird. Noel Van Bibber proudly shows visitors the framed photograph of this sighting.

Nature, the most durable subject of poets, is also open to those who lack words. "It's just being there," as Van Bibber put it.

And wondering for the sake of wondering. Birders watch and ask questions: How does an albatross stay at sea for four years and never come to shore? Why does a gull transform its appearance four times before it reaches maturity?

"I don't know why," Van Bibber said. "And that's why this is exciting."

There are gulls to think about. And warblers and shorebirds. Hawks, too.

Birders have favorites — all the while cherishing diversity. "In California, we've lost 95 percent of our wetlands, and that never used to mean anything to me," Van Bibber said. "How would we feel if we had a house and then we just had only a bathroom. When you do this and you realize how important these birds are, you become passionate about the environment."

White to appear at CRA meeting

CARMEL MAYOR Ken White will be the speaker at the regular meeting of the Carmel Residents Association on Thursday, Sept. 24, at the Vista Lobos meeting room, Junipero and Fourth. A refreshment period starts at 4 p.m., and the program begins at 4:30. The meeting is open to the public.

Mayor White is expected to talk about Carmel's successes, its problems, including the current budget situation, and his hopes for the city's future.

He will answer questions from the audience.

Also on the program will be Brian Roseth, city associate planner, who will discuss auto parking management and trip reduction. Carmel is required by state and federal mandates to develop ordinances aimed at reducing traffic and parking congestion.

Panetta, dignitaries lead official bay sanctuary ceremonies

"The reason for our sanctuary is clear," Panetta said. "We made a conscious decision we would not sell our coast for a barrel of oil."

Nor would residents tolerate the intentions of the Federal Bureau of Reclamation and some communities outside the Monterey Peninsula to "dump toxic wastes into our bay," he added.

On Sept. 15, NOAA designated the Monterey Bay a national marine sanctuary that extends 5,312 square miles along the California coast, from the Golden Gate in the north to San Simeon Cove in the south. California's sanctuary is the largest of 11 marine preserves in the United States.

Earlier this week, President George Bush was expected to approve NOAA's final revised conditions for protection of the sanctuary, conditions Congress has already adopted.

Bush's presence had also been anticipated, but the president had declined invitations to the dedication, according to White House officials.

Despite the president's absence, however, NOAA's leader John A. Knauss, commended the Bush administration for recognizing the importance of the sanctuary program. During the ceremony, Knauss credited the administration with approving more programs in the last 16 years than any of the previous administrations.

Residents commended

Knauss, undersecretary for the federal department of commerce organization, also lauded supporters—especially those from the Central Coast—for their vigilance and persistence in preserving a bay that encompasses the largest underwater canyon in the world.

"I've been to a number of areas in the country and I've never seen such an outpouring of support," Knauss said.

In June, the president approved the federal organization's final environmental impact statement that prohibits offshore oil-drilling and other geological extractions, limits the disposal of sewage and regulates new disposal sites for "dredge spoil" within the new marine preserve.

Other activities limited by the FEIS include airplane overflights, the operation of jet skis and the taking of marine wildlife.

As the ceremonies continued, immediately to the northwest people toured cutters and research vessels that docked along the U.S. Coast Guard Pier. A sometimes biting wind swept northeast in the direction of the nearly 50 environmental exhibits that took place near the bike trail where hundreds of spectators were concentrated.

A small spill

On the medium endurance cutter Venturous, 10 gallons of high-octane aircraft fuel accidentally spilled onto the deck, according to a Coast Guard report. About five gallons leaked into the ocean as operators attempted to transfer the fuel into a helicopter on board, said Petty Officer Kevin St. Pierre. The spill was contained immediately when marine environmental response teams used football-sized sponges designed specifically to absorb petroleum products from seawater, St. Pierre said. No traces of the fuel were found after the clean up.

Meanwhile, costumed dignitaries praised the sanctuary in their native languages and soldiers from the U.S. Army's 7th Infantry Division (light), were summoned by a second-grader from Monte Vista elementary school in Monterey to perform a 17-gun salute that would mark the end of the formal dedication.

Panetta was also asked to sign a credo declaring the celebration an historic event.

Earlier, he had proclaimed proudly: "This belongs to all of us."

And behind him, the bay shimmered.

Sanctuary dedication demonstrated

FOLLOWING THE formal dedication of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary on Sunday, a group of 20 people held a small demonstration at the Window-to-the Bay Park across from Lake El Estero in Monterey.

The Green Party, led by Monterey County spokesman Winston Elstob of Pacific Grove, protested the newly dedicated preserve, saying it is "full of loopholes," according to a press release.

The party contends President George Bush did not do enough to protect the coastline in his support of the sanctuary legislation, which was passed by Congress on Friday, Sept. 18, said Elstob. The spokesman pointed out the inadequacies, citing a report from Coastal Advocates, an environmental watch-dog organization based in Half Moon Bay.

According to the organization, some of the sanctuary's "defects" include not limiting "oil and gas activity" on its periphery, allowing commercial vessels and oil tanker traffic through the protected region, and failing to provide a plan for comprehensive regulations of sewage disposal. In addition, the legislation does not adequately regulate fisheries, which have been blamed in the past for the declining population of blue sharks due to drift and gill netting.

"We ask, why are we having a celebration before we have a viable sanctuary," Elstob said.

Recreation

bones operation of all departments.

The council, as the policy-making body, was asked to look at a column of $578,071 in cuts.

From that column, the $45,000 in question seemed like a remote corner of the budget. Yet the five council members quickly came to consensus on nearly everything in the column (although saving final action for next week), and then focused on the rec department.

Currently, the department, housed at the Vista Lobos building, has two full-time workers: a recreation coordinator and an administrative assistant. The city administration's personnel director, Jerry Pullen, spreads himself thinly by overseeing the department while performing his administrative duties.

The department, for starters, offers classes, runs a day camp, stages special events, even conducts a regularly scheduled bingo night. One and all called it a vital resource for the very young and very old — two groups often neglected in Carmel.

"This department is the heart and soul of this community," said resident Noel Van Bibber.

"I strongly feel we reject our children in Carmel-by-the-Sea," said Pat Sippel. "If we have to have pot holes in our streets, that would be preferable to turning out our kids and senior citizens."

Council members found themselves in a fix: On one hand, everyone wanted to save the department. On the other, they had to ask, what else would be lost in doing so?

Councilwoman Livingston was the most adamant that, if painful cuts had to be made, the recreation department was the right place to begin.

For starters, she noted it is the newest department, and other cities and organizations offer many of the same kinds of programs and activities.

Cost-benefit factor

Moreover, she referred a number of times to something one of the speakers said during the public hearing. Alan Williams spoke of the need of city government to study the "cost-benefit" factor associated with each service. Livingston argued police and fire protection, for example, is a service with the widest and most important benefit. Recreation, on the other hand, serves a relative few.

Meanwhile, Councilman Bob Fischer said the recreation department should be spared, and the fat should be trimmed elsewhere. He was thinking of the $259,000 the city will spend this year on its part-time staffing. He noted that the library alone is budgeted $109,000 for its temporary employment.

When D'Ambrosio returns with an adjusted plan next Tuesday, he is likely to consider compensating for the recreation department by reducing from this category. But the council did not give him specific direction to limit his attention to one area of expenditures.

D'Ambrosio cautioned the council that "seasonal relief" — another term for hourly, temporary help — has already been cut. And, he said, the jobs and assignment provide labor, often highly skilled, that the city cannot do without.

"Whenever you say 'cut-back' on seasonal relief, you cut back on services, whether you like it or not," D'Ambrosio said.

Fischer was skeptical. When D'Ambrosio asked the councilman if he should go department by department to detail what all of this temporary help contributes, Fischer said, "I really don't want to hear how every part-time position in this city is so important and how we can't do without all of them — that would be a waste of my time."

Budget manager Davenport said the reason the savings for dissolving the recreation department would be only $45,000 for 1992-93 is twofold: First, the fiscal year is well under way; second, the city would have to pay unemployment for the layoffs.

In a sense, the council was glaring at the tip of an iceberg, since the size of city government is now being trimmed.

The term "downsizing" is becoming the latest buzzword in town. While the city has 102 "authorized employees," explained Financial Services Coordinator Sandi Davenport, seven positions are already "frozen" as a result of the roughly two-year-old hiring freeze.

Meanwhile, the city this year set up a Golden Handshake program for willing employees. Four of them — from four separate departments — have agreed to retire early or go elsewhere in exchange for four months base salary, according to Davenport.

She and D'Ambrosio said the arrangement was actually more cost-effective to the city than layoffs would have been.

Also this year, the administration will cut about $115,000 — amounting to about a half dozen city positions — to achieve a balanced budget. Those reductions are above and beyond the recreation department cuts, whatever they turn out to be.

How the city got into this budget turmoil is a complex matter.

For starters, there's the recession, which has flattened the revenue cornerstones of property, sales and hostelry taxes. Meanwhile, salaries and benefits have risen.

Two speakers at the hearing, Alan Williams and Howard Nieman, who have taken part in a recent budget study, proposed that the imbalance is not new, but in fact reflects a five-year trend. City officials are aware of this trend.

In numbers confirmed by city hall, the study reports "operating revenues" to have crept up just 3 percent in five years. But salaries and benefits have risen 33 percent over the same period. The city has gotten along by drawing from reserves and decreasing spending on materials, maintenance and repairs.

This year was unusually tough because of the recession, the state's claim on a portion of the property taxes, and the city's obligation to replenish $250,000 from the Workers' Compensation fund it drew from previously.

The city's budget makers have agreed that this year's cuts won't be the last.

CHS student is semifinalist in National Merit Scholarship

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE NATIONAL Merit Scholarship Corporation recently announced that Christopher Tarnas, a senior at Carmel High School, has been selected as a semifinalist in the 1993 Merit Scholarship Competition.

Tarnas qualified as a semifinalist after performing exceptionally well on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) in 1991. He must now advance to the finalist level of competition to be considered for a Merit Scholarship. Scholarship amounts vary from $250 to $2,000, according to financial need and other criteria.

To qualify as a finalist, a semifinalist must have an outstanding academic record, be endorsed and recommended by the high school principal, and submit SAT scores that confirm his or her PSAT performance. Selections are made on the basis of professional evaluations of a finalist's abilities, accomplishments, and personal attributes important for success at the college level.

Tarnas appears to be well on his way. While working on the yearbook staff at CHS for two years, Tarnas utilized his desktop publishing and computer skills. His main academic interests are in the field of computer graphics and virtual reality. An avid reader, he hopes to inte-

"Reading...that's what did it for me," Tarnas said.

Tarnas tentatively plans to attend the University of California at Santa Cruz in the fall of 1993, majoring in computer information science.

'La Fiesta' on Sunday

THE CARMEL Mission Basilica will celebrate the 28th annual Fiesta de San Carlos Borromeo honoring the memory of Father Junipero Serra, founder of the Carmel Mission Sunday, Sept. 27.

"La Fiesta" as the early Californians called it, will continue the tradition of mingling the old with the new. The Franciscan Padres and local American Indians celebrated all major Franciscan saints' days, but the greatest celebration was at the Carmel Mission on Nov. 4, which was the feast day for St. Charles Borromeo's.

This year the Carmel Mission courtyard will be open for festivities from noon to 5 p.m. There will be a chicken barbecue for $7 and several other booths offering tacos, burritos, cotton candy, hot dogs, popcorn, ice cream, soft drinks, wine and beer.

The afternoon will include the Spanish-Mexican music of El Mariachi Mixtlan de la Bahia de Monterey, a Mexican folk dancing troupe Grupo Folklorico-Mexicana Xocipilli from San Jose, and a flamenco singer and guitarist Javier Sanchez-Lozano. Along with 64 arts and crafts display booths, there will be games for the young and old as well.

Everyone is invited to enjoy the day at the beautiful, serene adobe monument to Padre Serra. Admissions is free. For more information call 624-1271 or 624-2246.

Tree care workshop

IT WAS a kind of seminar in the woods.

On Saturday morning, the city's department of forestry held an outdoor workshop on tree care, including a demonstration by Cliff Hatch, Carmel's tree-climbing expert, on the proper way to remove branches (shown here).

"I think it was very successful," said City Forester Gary Kelly, about the first-ever event of its kind in Carmel.

Those who came learned about the history of the urban forest, tree-planting methods and common tree diseases, for starters. The subjects were taken up at seven "stations" at Forest Hill Park.

Kelly intends to make the workshop an annual event. He said the 50 or so people who appeared made for a satisfactory turnout.

Carmel Valley Outlook

THE ULTRA-EXCLUSIVE Carmel Valley Ranch Resort will go to the highest bidder to help pay Landmark Land Co. creditors. (Susan Beck photo.)

Carmel Valley

Founding developer is hoping to buy Carmel Valley Ranch Resort

By SUSAN BECK

THE EXCLUSIVE Carmel Valley Ranch Resort is up for grabs.

As part of the enormous takeover by the federal Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) of Landmark Land Co., Inc.'s properties, Carmel Valley Ranch will be sold to pay creditors.

Considered perhaps the fastest growing recreation developers in the world, Landmark Land's executives were replaced by federal regulators when the United States Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist denied the company's bid to retain possession of the properties under the protection of a bankruptcy court in Charleston, S.C.

The one exception in Landmark Land's vast holdings across the country is Carmel Valley Ranch. It is a solvent corporation. "We are not in Chapter 11," said Nick Marotta, a native of Monterey, and one of the founders of the development. "All our bills are paid."

Pursuing purchase

Marotta has pursued the purchase of Carmel Valley Ranch for the past six months along with a partner who wishes to remain anonymous, but is also a member of the ranch.

Marotta holds 12.5 percent of the shares in Carmel Valley Ranch, Inc. but, RTC has controlling interest in the balance of the shares.

The property will be appraised and sold along with the other holdings. Usually, with this type of sale the selling price is considerably lower than in a regular sale's transaction, and more people will be bidding for the property.

Marotta said that RTC is planning to split up the golf courses into packages for sale.

"I had been trying to get an offer together," said Marotta, "but if they package the golf courses it will hurt me. Now my chances have been diminished because I'm only interested in Carmel Valley Ranch. Maybe they will consider just an offer for the ranch."

He said he has plans to change the financial numbers at the ranch.

"In 20 years we have never had a dividend. I would like change that if I am the successful bidder."

He said that there are about 105 units still to be built. The existing development includes a hotel, golf course, tennis club and 300 acres designated as land reserve.

Carmel River

Steelhead Association urges river be restored now

By SUSAN BECK

THE CARMEL is a lovely little river. It isn't very long but in its course it has everything a river should have.

John Steinbeck wrote those lines in his book Cannery Row. Were he here today, he surely would not be able to say the same thing.

With continued drought and overdraft of the Carmel River, the riparian corridor is suffering, the animal life along the river bank is diminishing, and the steelhead is only surviving through the efforts of the

STEELHEAD FISHING at Garland Park in Carmel Valley in 1979.

Chews Ridge

Locals adamantly oppose Navy's Chews Ridge observatory project

By SUSAN BECK

YOU COULD cut a knife through the intense objection to the U. S. Navy's proposal to construct and operate an Optical Interferometer at Chews Ridge.

There was standing room only in the 85-seat capacity Sunset Center Scout House in Carmel Tuesday, Sept. 22 where the public hearing was conducted by representatives of the Navy's environmental planning and project managers.

The meeting was open to the public after one hour of explanation about the Optical Interferometer, which measures star position accuracies and time, and the preferred choices to locate which are Chews Ridge in upper Carmel Valley, Anderson Peak in Big Sur and least preferable Flagstaff, Ariz.

Karin Strasser Kauffman, chair of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors briefly summarized her objections and ended with a note of warning.

Ultra-fussy

"I would strongly recommend you look at the Flagstaff sight. We are ultra-fussy here, and if you want to have this built by 1994 it would be more reasonable to consider somewhere else," said Strasser Kauffman.

She pointed out that the key policies in the Cachagua Area Plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan would challenge every aspect of the proposed project.

"I am not convinced that your project complies with these plans. There are several statements that lack documentation. The master plans were developed through years of controversy and are not easily amended," said Strasser Kauffman.

"The surrounding communities have severely restricted themselves, and at a minimum, especially the military would have to meet the needs of the local residents."

She added that the county's experience with the military was not the best. "Some of the worst and most intrusive projects in the community are military."

One example Strasser Kauffman used to get her point across was the Navy's statement about trucking water in to the site.

It's unacceptable

"If you can't live within your means on the site, you can't do it. It's unacceptable. You can't underestimate the water problem here. I urge you to research this more carefully. In Carmel Valley we have a water moratorium. If you are not factored in, then basically you can't take water from a population that doesn't have enough to go around."

Tom Little Bear Nason, tribal spokesperson for the Esselen Indian Tribe of Monterey County explained that the Esselen tribal headquarters are located three miles from the proposed project site.

He said that Chews Ridge is a sacred altar and shrine to the Indians, and that there are numerous unrecorded cultural resources in and around the planned area and disruption of these sites would have serious impacts on the Esselen's culture and lifestyle.

Carmel River Steelhead Association.

Despite the proposal by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to build a new Los Padres Dam by the year 2002 that is expected to bring back the river all year long, the Steelhead Association is not convinced it is the way to go.

"I believe in supporting a project that will restore the river now, and in the process won't destroy the steelhead resource," said Roy Thomas, past president of the association.

Thomas, along with representatives of the Residents Water Committee and the Sierra Club, voiced their complaints to the California State Water Resources Control Board hearings in Sacramento in August.

At the hearing Thomas referred to the Carmel River as "a gem in the heart of one of the most beautiful places on earth that is almost completely destroyed."

He said as the demand for more water grew, Cal-Am increased diversion and added a string of wells in and adjacent to the river. Along with more golf courses and subsequently, more new wells, the cumulative impacts of unmitigated diversions and fish passage obstructions reduced the steelhead resource to near extinction.

Despite the recognized problem since 1948, said Thomas, nothing has been done. Only with the threat of the hearing did the water district enforce a resultant interim relief plan.

Thomas made 20 alternative suggestions at the hearings as to how to take care of the impending problem of Carmel River as soon as possible.

One of his recommendations was to drill five to seven new wells between Rancho Canada and Highway 1, then pump water back up the river, creating an opportunity for the water to be used twice allowing for restoring the riparian and steelhead.

"We can have a multi-use of the water by diverting it as low as possible," said Thomas.

He said the process would provide the natural flow of the river plus the usual diversion and upper well draw as surface flow. The increased flow would irrigate the riparian vegetation, provide recreation, and aquatic habitat.

"I bet the money spent annually on interim relief would be enough to completely offset the extra cost of not having

Chews Ridge project

"What scares us is that the U. S. Forest Service will allow observatories and other such projects on all of the Ventana Wilderness mountains," said Nason.

"They are not managing it that way that we think they should. The forest and wilderness areas are set up to protect and keep open these areas. The device must not be built at either Monterey site. Certainly building it at your existing Naval Observatory in Flagstaff will cause all of us less grief," said Nason.

After the hearing he said that the 35 complaints to the Navy strongly indicated that the community clearly does not want this project here.

Emotional plea

Tia Strozer, a member of the Zen Mountain Center at Tassajara Hot Springs, made an emotional plea to the Navy to discontinue any interest in Chews Ridge.

"Many people come away from Tassajara and the surrounding wilderness with the feeling that the place is special. They take this experience with them back to the outside world. The natural quality of unspoiled wilderness makes this opportunity possible regardless of religious preference.

"We strongly object to any development along the road and within the forest surrounding the wilderness itself. If the forest service does not assume the responsibility of safe-guarding our wild places, then we will take it upon ourselves to do that very thing," said Strozer.

Restore Carmel River

any gravity upstream diversions," said Thomas.

"I think the problem is motivation. If the water district and Cal-Am work too hard in Carmel Valley they will lose support for the dam. I think we need one, but not at the expense of holding the river hostage to enhance the need for a new dam," said Thomas.

Jim Cofer, general manager of the water district, said there are two major reasons for not considering wells in the lower end of the Carmel River. First, the interference impact on existing wells, and second, the possibility of salt water getting into the system.

Impact lagoon

He said, "Seven new wells would impact the lagoon and de-water the lower zone." Also, he added, "The idea presupposes that the water will flow down fast enough traveling underground to meet the demands in the upper valley and elsewhere."

Other suggestions have been to use more of Seaside's water in the summer months to offset the lack of water in Carmel Valley.

"Seaside could not meet the demands even with the Paralta Well at peak times," said Cofer. "Cal-Am has used the maximum capacity in Seaside for the past four years and is trying to reestablish the half of usable storage that has been depleted."

One measure in force by Cal-Am for the past two years is pumping water from the lowest wells first in the mid valley area. Another alternative being researched by the water district is the September Ranch along Carmel Valley Road for an off channel water supply.

Cofer said that Thomas' idea was not impossible but not probable.

"I'm not saying you can't put more wells in, but it is an environmental trade off," said Cofer.

One major consideration against pursuing lower valley water diversion is that it would probably take equally as long to implement.

"There would be an EIR, and it would require as many permits as the dam. Also, the lawsuits from other well users could take up to 10 years," said Cofer.

"The only real answer is the dam. It will have a flowing river in most years. Probably two out of 10 years will have no river all the way down. In the last 90 years we have had seven droughts. I think that during only one year, 1983, in those 90 years did we have a flowing river year round."

Business Beat

COLDWELL BANKER MERGES OFFICES

The Coldwell Banker office in Monterey has merged with the Carmel office. The announcement was made by Larry Knapp, president of the company's Northwest Region. "We're creating a bigger office that is better able to service THE Monterey Peninsula," said Knapp. "We've combined the strengths of the agents in Monterey with those in Carmel creating a mega-office of 51 agents in Carmel. Coldwell Banker continues to be the residential real estate leader in Northern California with more than 10,000 listings and nearly $4 billion in sales in 1991," said Knapp.

Coldwell Banker Carmel is located at 26611 Carmel Center Place, and will be managed by Ruth Krumin, an eight-year veteran of the company. Krumin had assumed the sales manager position of both offices prior to the two being consolidated. Coldwell Banker is a member of the Sears Financial Network.

HOSPITALITY EMPLOYEES RECOGNIZED

Nearly 900 local hospitality employees and members of the community turned out for the Monterey County Hospitality Recognition Day Luncheon and Awards Ceremony Sept. 11. The annual event, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Visitors & Convention Bureau, along with many other local hospitality organizations, recognized the role of service by commending local hospitality professionals. Nearly 200 hospitality employees were nominated by their employers for exemplifying exceptional service, with each nominee receiving a certificate of appreciation. From all the nominations, 10 top employees were granted Excellence in Hospitality Awards and were recognized with awards from Senator Henry Mello, Assemblyman Sam Farr and Congressman Leon Panetta.

Hospitality Excellence Award recipients:

Maria Bates, Executive Housekeeper, Sandpiper Inn; Frederick Bell, Guest Service Assoc., Monterey Marriott; Kerry Jackson, Lead Admin.-Support Tech., Monterey Bay Aquarium; Jennifer Leyva, Front Desk Rep., Asilomar Conference Center; Angelito Samson, Waitperson, Quail Lodge; Ron Blokker, Executive Housekeeper, Monterey Plaza Hotel; Mary Galloway, Room Cleaner, Pine Inn; Kathy Giger, Admin. Assistant, Inns of Monterey; Anita Starr, Hostess, The Fishwife Restaurant; Papa Vince Award Recipient: Lei Bumanglag, Food and Beverage Cashier, Carmel Valley Ranch Resort.

In keeping with the theme of the day, special guest and motivational speaker, Roger Dow, Vice President of Sales and Marketing Service for Marriott Hotels and Restaurants, presented a keynote address emphasizing the importance good service plays in the hospitality industry.

JIM VON BRUNN HIRED

Progressive Marketing hired Jim von Brunn to head its expanded Client Services Department.

In his new role as Director of Client Services, von Brunn will work with agency president, Lou Sena, to structure the agency for increased capacity, work with existing clients, and add to Progressive's national and international client list.

"In the past, I've spearheaded most of the agency's client interaction," says Sena. "This has served us well for the past 10 years, but we realized that if the agency was to continue to grow, we would need to add another high-level person. I feel Jim brings an understanding of client issues, large agency structure and a varied experience that few people can match."

Von Brunn has held key account management positions with several of the industry's most prestigious agencies. At Creamer/Lois, Inc. in New York, he was a senior A.E. on the Sheraton, EXXON and Schenley accounts. At J. Walter Thompson, he managed regional accounts for the U.S. Marine Corps and Burger King. At Dailey/Marschalk Advertising in San Francisco, he managed the Royal Viking Line and Mexicana Airlines accounts.

A 1974 graduate of the University of Miami, von Brunn did a successful stint in advertising sales for Newsweek's San Francisco office, and went in-house with Redwood City, California's EPYX Inc., where he was marketing manager for some of the company's most strategic product lines.

Jazz reality

"I'M CLINT Eastwood and I love jazz."

That's all it took. Monterey Jazz Festival audiences had speculated for three days about whether legends Dizzy Gillespie and Dave Brubeck could muster the stamina to pull off the final night's tribute to festival co-founder Jimmy Lyons.

Eastwood's appearance on stage as the opener pumped raw adrenalin into the air at a time when it was most needed.

It was touch and go. Gillespie, recovering from surgery, was there by sheer will power. Brubeck's voice had lost its rich ring. But the Modern Jazz Quartet played just like always, sophisticated and mellow, man, mellow.

The circle was unbroken and jazz lived on, despite Lyon's reluctant departure and the failing health of some of its most famous stars.

The old guard and the new order were favorite topics throughout the weekend. Were there any differences in the music now that the long-awaited changing of the guard had finally come and Lyons had officially turned the stage over to his young successor, Tim Jackson?

Some things were obvious. The backdrop was new. The sound system seemed better. There were more aisles in Patec Arena.

Opening the festival with the Roy Hargrove Quintet was an energetic departure from the old days of walkin' and talkin' and then startin'. But, what about the festival as a whole? Was it different?

"There's no change at all," said Mark Naftalin, somewhat apologetically. "I've programed the Saturday afternoon blues for years now. It feels the same."

A ticket taker only saw the obvious in the Saturday afternoon blues lineup. "Well, there's always one high-powered woman, some young guys, some old guys. This year maybe there was more harmonica."

"The only reality is perception," Jazz Festival Board President "Doc" Etienne philosophized, then switched tempo and added, realistically, "When we hired Tim Jackson as the new festival manager we charged him to continue the tradition of mainstream jazz, but he will put his spin on it."

Etienne recognizes the festival needs new faces and knows Jackson will draw from today's pool of talented young jazz musicians in years to come.

There were just as many old timers in the audience as on stage at the final gathering of Jimmy's friends. Will the fans who are accustomed to the predictable Lyons' brand of music accept Jackson's hot new sounds?

Only time will tell. Perhaps some of them will follow Lyons and retire from the scene, making way for new faces in the crowd.

Whatever evolution takes place in the personnel, staging, physical makeup and audience, one thing is certain. The music will live on and like Clint Eastwood, audiences will continue to come to Monterey, because, quite simply, they love jazz.

That's from out front. For the backstage view point, check out John Detro's column this week on page 32.

SCOOPLETES

Bob March (no relation) of K-Bach radio will emcee "Opera Fest '92" the fund raiser for the Monterey Opera Association on Saturday, Sept. 26 at the Monterey Conference Center. Call 649-OPRA for tickets.

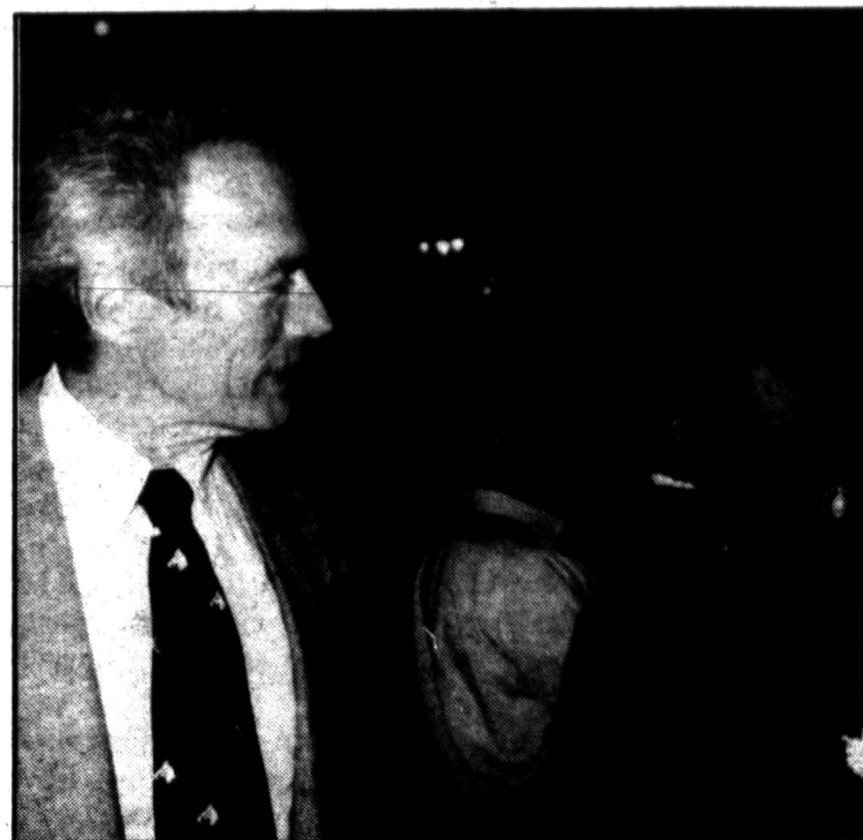

The late Marjory Lloyd and Clint Eastwood received awards from Carmel Heritage at the "Hats Off Party" held at Mission Ranch. Lloyd was acknowledged for her many contributions to Carmel-by-the-Sea and Eastwood was commended for his preservation of Mission Ranch.

"Around the World in 80 Ways," this year's Taste of Carmel event raised nearly $6,000 more than last year, at a time when additional funds are sorely needed.

The grand drawing prize at this year's "Grillmasters Classic" is a trip for two to Paris. Accommodations for five nights at the Hotel Plaza Athenee, a Forte Exclusive hotel, and airfare are included. You need not be present to win, but it would be a lot more fun. Call 649-5837 for details on this AIWF event, slotted for Sunday, Sept. 27 at The Beach & Tennis Club, Pebble Beach.

Golf & Travel

By Ray A. March

Golf: now and then

THERE'S GOOD news and possibly some bad news for golfers.

Nationwide, 351 new courses opened for play in 1991. Florida was the leader with 35, and California was second with 21.

Interestingly enough, according to statistics released by the National Golf Foundation, Michigan is where new golf course action is taking place. That state had 45 courses under construction at the end of 1991, while California had 31 courses underway.

In a climate of growing popularity, there is some bad news on the horizon. A slowdown in golf course construction may be coming and here is why, according to the NGF:

- The high cost of land.
  - The decline of the real estate market and its impact on the number of future golf courses that will be real estate related.
  - The availability of financing that does not require a high percentage of equity participation on the part of the borrower.
  - The high cost of meeting environmental regulations.
- An interesting note in the NGF report: "NGF research shows that it takes an average of almost three years for most golf course development projects to move from inception to completion." We wonder if they calculated The Links at Spanish Bay into those averages.

A potential slowdown has particular significance in California where there is more demand than there are golf holes.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Max's story

CANYOU believe this face? The face of an angel! This is "Max" Bone and he's my very special friend. I'd like to share his story with you.

Early this year we received a very touching letter from David Bone, Max's "dad." David had recently gone through a very painful time in his life and he was alone. Enter Max, a beautiful black Labrador puppy who filled a great need for love and companionship. They hit it off right away and everything was fine until David began to notice some changes in Max: He wasn't sitting straight, he hopped when he ran, he was sometimes stiff in his hind quarters.

His veterinarian examined Max and x-rayed him and the news was terrible. David consulted another veterinarian and the diagnosis was the same: Perform hip replacement surgery or Max would have to be euthanized within two years because of the severity of the dysplasia. Hip replacement surgeries tend to be very successful. You may recall that my Buster had that surgery a few months ago and he's just like new.

David wanted very much to go ahead with the procedure, but the cost was much more than his limited income could handle. So, David sought odd jobs, overtime, anything to come up with the money for Max's surgery, including his letter to the DDPF. He was prepared to do whatever he had to do to help Max—including giving him up if a new owner would promise to have the surgery done! Needless to say, we contacted the Old Dominion Animal Hospital in McLean, Virginia, and arranged to help with the surgery.

Remarkable recovery

Max was operated on immediately and his recovery has been as remarkable as Buster's. David has faithfully written and sent pictures of Max from the day he entered the hospital, through his recuperation, to his first steps on his new hip and finally, to Max trotting along at the park near his home, looking very fit and pain-free.

This is a difficult economic time for all of us. We've had to tighten our belts and stretch our budgets. Charitable organizations like the DDPF can't prosper at a time when so many people are losing their jobs and their homes. We give help as we are able and we were able to help Max. It's thrilling to share this story with you. What a joy to know that we were able to help David and Max remain Best Friends!

That's it for this week. Thanks for caring!

How to survive the new economy

EVERY TIME a client comes to me and says, "I lost my job... I've been laid off... or I got fired," I smile and reply, "Good, now you can get on with your own life." T. Saturn in Aquarius is showing us the collapse of the Industrial Age along with T. Neptune-Uranus in Capricorn which is showing us the collapse of big business along with corporations as every business day, this nation loses an average of 1,500 corporate jobs. Corporations like the Scorpion (i.e. T. Pluto in Scorpio) are devouring each other until finally you will no longer see any more employer-employee relationships.

Eighty-five percent of the jobs in this country have very little or no creativity involved in the work process... they are simply daily routines in moving products from here to there, ask any truck driver.

By the year 2000, I believe there will not only be a new economic structure which will be totally manageable but predictable by astrological standards. There will be no rich and no poor... all will be equal. How long have you all dreamed of equal distribution of wealth? Expect in its place, an emphasis on the "creative individual" and more private enterprise which will certainly raise the human spirit. Just think: no more private banking, but especially no more employer/employee relationships. It's time to express your creative genius and not to worry... everyone will have an income. I'm excited about the next eight years; new products, new services. Saturn has been trying to teach us that self control is the key to richness in life and abundance. Know this: the longer you work for someone else, the longer you will still be in a parent-child relationship and dependent. Don't you think it's time to grow up?

Look at it like this: each of you is being released from a form of slavery, class distinction and have the opportunity and gift of total economic freedom and making your dreams come true.

The future is extremely predictable through astrology and so is life and its people. My clients are respectable individuals who are deeply involved in this transition from a "worker bee" in the industrial age into a service age enterprise of self-employment and self-empowerment. We can all participate and make great strides in the flow of evolution. What you see happening now is the elimination of labor (ruled by Saturn and the 6th house) which for so many years has been the only conduit for the distribution of wealth. Work (ruled by Saturn) has been destroying the ecological balance and has to stop in order for us to survive on this planet Earth. By the year 2000, wealth will be guaranteed to every living human being. Isn't that worth looking forward to?

Collapse of authority

Authority is collapsing, look at the presidential election process. The planet is giving us a gift, a most fabulous opportunity to govern ourselves as we witness the death of those who claim to have "authority over others."

Who's going to run your business? Computers. They are going to manage goods and services that human beings create and be most efficient with predictable programs. In addition, we will have computerized robot technology that will free us from the awful burden of labor or work in our lifetime and together we can shovel the feces without ever getting dirty. What marvelous beginnings are ahead of us... reach out, branch out, and speak out, and try to imagine what this will mean to all of you personally by creating a "New World" environment, where war is no longer a threat and you don't have to work for someone else in order to have the basics: food, shelter, transportation. You can have a lot more free time, with no pressure to perform or work! Indeed the old world is ending... rejoice, don't be sad.

Next week: The Ice Age is coming... Where are the safe places to live?

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Football Wrap-up

Varsity

THE PADRES suffered their first loss of the season last Saturday at the hands of a powerful Santa Cruz High attack. The Cardinal offense racked up 418 yards of total offense, as they ran away with the game 36-0.

"We just came out flat," said Dan Silver, a junior lineman for Carmel.

Three speedy Santa Cruz running backs, who each rushed for over 80 yards, are the main reason Santa Cruz is the favorite to win it's league. Jermaine Robinson ran for 102 yards, caught a 17 yard touchdown pass, and returned an interception 47 yards for a touchdown to lead his team to the victory.

Carmel, down 28-0 at the first half, came out throwing in the second half and met with some success until turnovers ended big drives. Padre quarterback Robby Shaffer completed 19 passes for 143 yards. Pass protection for Shaffer was good, as he was seldom hurried, with the Santa Cruz defense failing to collect a sack.

The Padres return home this coming weekend to face Monte Vista Christian. Competing in it's first year of play, Monte Vista is 1-1 after suffering a 42-0 loss at the hands of Robert Louis Stevenson last weekend. John Geisler will be back to lead the Padre offense after being injured for the early part of the season. Geisler, only a sophomore, is highly touted for his passing ability. The Padres should have their way with the Mustangs this Saturday. The JV game will start at 11:30, and the varsity takes the field at 2:00.

Fresh-Soph

The Padre JV squad also had a tough time with Santa Cruz, losing 44-6. Coach Able's team, having lost four starters out sick with the flu, suffered an even bigger

With five starters out, the game was all uphill for Carmel's frosh-soph. They played respectably for most of the game, with the Cardinals' five scores coming on big plays or turnovers. Ryan Sanchez connected with John Porteous for a thirty yard touchdown pass to break up the shutout by Santa Cruz.

"It was really a wake up call for us," said head coach John Ables.

Sophomores Bart Rowley, Paul Lewellen, and Juan Cortina turned in strong games on both offense and defense, and Ryan Sanchez played another solid game at quarterback. Freshmen Brett Eyerman and John Martine also played well filling in despite having the flu.

Reactions to CCGG

Shadow government

Dear Editor:

It is obvious to me that the group of people who call themselves "Citizens for Good Government" are a political action group with an agenda of their own. Looking at their membership you will see that over half of them are landlords or their paid representatives, and the others are clearly aligned with commercial interests. Are we naive enough to believe that they are acting out of the goodness of their hearts?

Three members of this group have lost elections in Carmel; one has lost two bids for city council, one once and one recently for mayor. Since they can't get elected to the office by voters, are they trying to form a shadow government to run the town anyway?

I hope that the council members go on trying to promote harmony in spite of them. As Barbara Livingston puts it, "They are a small grumpy group of people who lost the last election." Potentially they are a lot more sinister than the noncohesive group of individuals who have joined the CRA whom they seem to be attempting to denigrate.

Margaret D. White
Carmel

Unwarranted accusations

Dear Editor:

I couldn't believe my eyes when I looked at the local tabloids yesterday! An arrogant group of 12 people are threatening three dedicated public officials with recall — when two have only been in office for five months!

The basis for the accusations seems to be the expenditure of funds for several public projects — some of those accused weren't even on the council when these projects were voted on.

Isn't it interesting that when the CCGG's most famous member, Mr. Eastwood, was mayor, he indebted the city $215,000 a year for five years ($1,075,000) for the new library branch — which many feel was not sound planning to build a children's library so far from the main branch in a village with very few children. And, in purchasing the Handley property, Mr. Eastwood further indebted the city for $450,000 for 10 years ($4,500,000). For those who don't want to add, this totals over five and one half million dollars.

Is this an example of the pot calling the kettle black?

During this critical time, the entire city council needs to focus its energy on making positive budgetary steps. They should not have to be distracted by a small special-interest political action committee issuing demands and making threats.

Margaret L. Purchase
Carmel

Inappropriate

Dear Editor:

Some of my fellow Carmelites are astonished that the Carmel Citizens for Good Government (CCGG) have threatened a "housecleaning" of the city council (Pine Cone, Sept. 17) unless Mayor White and councilmembers Brooks and Livingston agree within 30 days to support six CCGG proposals. The militance and the ultimatum do seem inappropriate, except in their broader context: here we are in the final days of a "hysterical" presidential battle barely interrupted by two historical hurricanes; shucks, you're kind of forced to act like Saddam Hussein if you're going to get noticed this season. If the CCGG keep up this behavior after November, though, I think they're going to look pretty silly.

Fenn C. Horton
Carmel

Senseless attack

Dear Editor:

I don't understand why the Citizens for Good Government targeted only three of the five members of the Carmel City Council with their threatening and demanding letter. If they want action, why don't they try to work peaceably with all the council members rather than threatening three of them?

Oddly enough, they accuse Councilwomen Brooks and Livingston of responsibility for the purchase of the Hodges property when neither of them were even on the council at the time of the transaction. And they seem to forget that Bob Fischer, whom they are not threatening, voted for the purchase.

The same with the First Murphy Park project; Barbara Livingston wasn't on the council and Bob Fischer voted in favor of the park.

They complain about the FAR issue (again, Livingston wasn't on the council) but members of the CCGG were among those who demanded an election. And, although they like to call it a landslide, in reality, they won by 94 votes which means the town was almost evenly divided on the issue.

Finally, the ultimatum from the commercial landlord-oriented CCGG asks the three councilpersons to "Place community above self-interest and political ambition." I ask, who is it that is operating for self interest and political ambition?

Paule E. Missud
Carmel

Pitiful spectacle

Dear Editor:

It would seem the nastiness of national politics has extended into little old Carmel-by-the-Sea. Although, not even in national politics are elected officials threatened with recall before they have had a chance to get settled into office. I thought recall was usually illegal before six months had passed. Guess we can teach those folks in Washington, D.C. a thing or two.

One sadly wonders what the motive is for the abrasive action of the CCGG, a tiny, self-appointed, ad-hoc political action group. Apparently, they can't accept the fact that Carmel's voters in the last two elections have elected a majority who are pro-resident. The behavior and statements of the CCGG may be described as truly schizophrenic. On one hand they call for a "restoration of civility," then on the other, they denounce the mayor and two of the council members in a rude, threatening and most "uncivil" manner. Mr. Sutton claims "they designed their Restore the Heart of Carmel plan to bring back the stability as well as the good feelings and sense of unity that has existed in Carmel for most of this century." Yet their abusive attitude toward all who have the temerity to disagree with them is designed to do everything except restore "stability or good feelings or a sense of unity." In point of fact it tears the Heart right out of Carmel.

It is a pitiful spectacle when a handful of "outs" cannot accept their defeat at the polls graciously and wait patiently and "civily" for the next election. Isn't that the way we do things here in the good old U.S. of A.?

Kay Thomas
Carmel

Self-appointed arbiters

Dear Editor:

In times of financial crisis, demagogues emerge to rant, rave, posture and threaten.

A tiny group calling themselves the Citizens for Good Government falsely accuse a legally constituted organization of citizens numbering nearly 500 of trying to unduly influence the political process, while arrogantly threatening dire consequences to three out of five council persons if they fail to act upon a "plan" proposed by this elitist committee of 12 self-appointed arbiters of community goals and values.

They say that the CRA should have no voice but that they — this exceptional and more worthy dozen — should speak for all of us.

While decrying the abrasive politics they claim to have emerged in Carmel-by-the-Sea, they continue to add immeasurably to the atmosphere of incivility and discord by use of the oldest devices in the spin doctor's bag... misrepresentations, prevarications and bombast. If we're to weather this economic storm please let's have a little silence so that our duly elected officials can think instead of wasting time defending themselves against preposterous accusations and baseless charges.

Robert Campbell
Carmel

CRA affiliation OK

Dear Editor:

Even given that the Carmel Residents Association is a political organization, there should be no need for Ken White, Barbara Brooks and Barbara Livingston to disaffiliate from it any more than Mayor Daley of Chicago should disaffiliate from the Democratic Party or Governor Pete Wilson of California should disaffiliate from the Republican party.

They all govern and they all retain their affiliation whether or not people agree with their political decisions.

Erling Lagerholm
Carmel

What negativism?

Dear Editor:

On page 6 of the Sept. 10 issue of The Pine Cone, Linda Smith, whom I do not know, is quoted as saying "I think a lot of attention has gone to the business community and its problems. I don't think this town takes its residents enough into account;" and on page 19 a letter signed Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Houser, whom I do not know, says "It is the homeowners who contribute the most to creating and maintaining Carmel's quaint charm. It certainly is not the T-shirt shops on Ocean Avenue that maintain our property values."

In the same issue there are letters from three other individuals who are also concerned with residential matters. These are the same concerns of the CRA. And you call this negativism?

Harriet Shanner
Carmel

In other business

Vote him out

Dear Editor:

Abuse of power, fraud, misdeeds and violation of the basic rules most Americans must live by, have become the norm in Congress. Irresponsibility .... and a "perks-power-waste-greed" attitude fail to provide the leadership example we expect and pay for.

Leon Panetta has, for nearly 16 years, served on the Committee on House Administration, and more recently the Subcommittee on Personnel and Police. The subcommittee provides direct oversight of the House Postmaster operating the House Post Office, plagued by drug dealings and fraud, and the House Sergeant of Arms operating the House Bank, plagued by check kiting and mismanagement. The committee has operating responsibility for the House Restaurant and all the unpaid bills, the House Barber and Beauty Shops with tax-subsidized haircuts, the House contingent fund (a $300 million slush fund), and all the perks that adorn the self-made powerful.

Drug dealing, prostitution, corruption and waste is openly displayed only blocks from the Halls of Congress — indeed — in the Halls of Congress. If Leon can't provide tough leadership in his own backyard, how can we expect him to provide it for the nation?

Leon said on "Crossfire", "If their representative isn't tough enough to deal with these issues they ought to vote him out. It's called the right to vote."

At least Leon got that right!

I'm so lucky...

Committee meeting to refocus the committee.

4. Requested the forestry commission to develop a plan for citizen volunteers to assist in caring for our open space.

5. Actively working with the Sunset Theater renovation committee.

6. I've met with all city commission chairpersons.

7. Kept in regular communication with the planning commission chairperson.

8. Proposed a citizens budget committee.

9. Proposed and organized city town hall meeting.

10. Moved commercial zoning study to city council for an earlier decision date.

11. Re-focused city council meetings to a business-like atmosphere.

12. Met with city department directors.

13. Created a monthly forum to discuss city issues with representatives from the following organizations:

- Citizens for Good Government
- Carmel Business Association
- Northeast Neighbors Association
- Scenic Road Association

- Voice of Carmel
- Carmel Heritage

14. I continue to push for a joint planning commission-parking committee study session.

From all these meetings which are a vital part of the decision-making process, I have reaffirmed what I knew when I undertook the task of serving as mayor — that is that all of us seek the same goal. Whatever our passing disagreements, whatever small victories may be gained even at the price of civility, we all seek to preserve Carmel-by-the-Sea from the kind of decline and transformation that have afflicted many other California communities. We will succeed and do so more certainly if we protect our community's dignity and insure that the tone and manner of public discourse does not deter citizens from serving on our commissions. Public service in the immediate future will be more needed and should be more valued than at any time in our history.

Everyone should know how very proud I am to be a part of our very dedicated council.

In conclusion, as your mayor, I pledge to continue to lead with respect for the viewpoints of all individuals and groups. I am confident that such respect has not and will not diminish my effectiveness as mayor.

Carmel High welcomes new athletic director

AS CARMEL High begins another school year, the athletic program will no longer be run by Bruce Cates, but by former Carmel Middle School Assistant Principal Lisa Fraser.

Fraser has several goals for this year's program as the new athletic director of CHS. One of them is to have all sports, major and minor, represented equally in terms of support. Another is to raise funds so the sports program will have more money. Fraser also hopes to improve communication between coaches, students, and parents.

"I'd like to use athletics as an avenue for promoting a positive school climate," said Fraser, who is also coaching the varsity volleyball team.

Fraser has many responsibilities with her new position. These include managing the budget, working with the boosters, coordinating transportation, managing and supervising sports events, and making sure coaches and players abide by the athletic code.

"She's here for us and for the kids," said JV basketball coach Michael Woodie about the new athletic director.

Fraser sees it as very important to encourage students in athletics, for she believes "sports are the closest thing to real life kids will see, in terms of competition."

"I expect her (Fraser) to do an excellent job. She is well qualified," said JV football coach John Ables.

Fraser certainly is qualified for the job. She attended

San Jose State University on an athletic scholarship for both basketball and volleyball; plus, she has taught and coached for over 10 years.

"I'm impressed with her follow-through, her organizational skills, and her willingness to listen and communicate," said CHS secretary Anne Berry.

In only a few words, Fraser's main aim is to keep the quality sports program at CHS alive.

"You combine her past athletic experience with her organization and enthusiasm and you've got a great athletic director," said CHS varsity football coach Craig Johnston.

Editor's note: Paul Murphy is a senior at Carmel High School. He will be submitting a column for The Carmel Pine Cone on activities throughout the 1992-93 school year as part of an independent study program, supervised by CHS English teacher Dale DePalatis. 'Positively Padre' will appear every other week.

Something for everyone

PENINSULA SURFERS have enjoyed a veritable smorgasbord of small waves for the last two weeks.

Two small hurricanes off Baja delivered a small south swell while a sizeable north swell over Labor Day weekend minimized the crowd factor at any one spot. Beach breaks and reefs have been delivering small to medium-sized waves of average quality throughout the period.

ORGANIZERS REPORT a big turnout for Monterey

Bay's National Marine Sanctuary (MBNMS) designation last weekend.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium opened a new exhibit Sept. 21 in conjunction with the official designation. Called "Watching the Bay," the exhibit will highlight the sanctuary's many resources and explain its role in protecting them. It will also address specific ways in which the sanctuary will be managed to balance protection of the region's marine resources with continued human use of those resources.

A video called "Three Seasons of Monterey Bay," focusing on regional weather patterns, will also be part of the exhibit.

Monterey and Santa Cruz County residents can visit the Aquarium free through Friday, Sept. 25, with appropriate proof of residency. Call 648-4800 for details.

SAVE OUR Shores of Santa Cruz will kick off the Monterey Bay Sanctuary Watch Oct. 1, a watchdog program designed to allow citizens to report violations of MBNMS regulations.

Through the watch program, citizens are encouraged to report sewage spills, ocean dumping, chemical leaks, threats to wildlife, and other violations by calling the toll-free hotline number: 1 (800) 9-SHORES, or 1(800) 974-6737, to be activated in October.

SOS will hold briefing sessions for persons interested in participating in the Sanctuary Watch program. In Monterey, a meeting will be held Thursday, Oct. 1, in the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District Board Room, 24580 Silver Cloud Ct.

On that note, SOS reports Cowell's Beach in Santa Cruz was closed for a few days in August when 250,000 gallons of polluted runoff water were pumped into the Bay during a "test." The released water contained an unhealthy level of fecal coliform bacteria, which can cause infections, skin irritation, and diarrhea.

Hopefully, tougher laws governing the treatment and release of polluted water will prevent these types of incidents from occurring unchecked in the future.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Remember who's captain

RUFUS JONES tells us this old story. During a violent storm at sea a young boy was playing in the passenger lounge. The ship gave a tremendous lurch and someone asked if the lad was afraid. "Of course not," the lad answered. "My father is captain of this ship."

During the London blitz in World War II, an old Cockney woman was asked how she stood the bombing with such bravery. She replied: "Every night I say my prayers and then I remember that the Bible says God is always watching so I go to sleep. After all, there is no need for both of us to lie awake."

Oh Lord, help us to remember that you are the captain of the ship and also help us to realize that you are always watching over us in calm and in storm, in peace and in peril. It's not much of a compliment to you if we worry, is it? Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Jet skis are multiplying on American lakes, rivers and coastal waters. Likened to a motorcycle that rides on water, the highly maneuverable craft reaches speeds of more than 40 miles per hour. A group of retirees shoves off from a Wildwood, New Jersey, beach in summertime and rides the Atlantic Ocean parallel to the beach. "It's just a whole lot of fun," says 73-year-old Elwood Yungman.

At 86, Simone Beck produced her fifth book, "Food and Friends: A Memoir With Recipes." The resident of a small village in Southern France recounted how her cooking expertise developed at an early age and how she came to co-author "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" with Julia Child. Beck's mother wrote her traditional recipes in a black book, she explained, but the family's cook couldn't read. So, starting at about age 9, Beck would explain the recipes to the cook. The basis for her longevity, she said, is "Good food, no excesses, and work to give me energy."

Remember when? August 20, 1963. — The "hot-line" opened, directly linking the White House with the Kremlin one year after the crisis over Soviet missile installations in Cuba.

Festival of Firsts opens prize-winning theater piece

MAIN FEST of Firsts drama features Chuck Thurman and Mary-Ann Lucido...

...along with Sandy Sidener and Hansford Prince. (Brian Donoghue photos)

THIS YEAR'S top winner in the 15th annual Carmel Festival of Firsts playwriting competition — The Zamboni Situation — opens at 8 p.m. Sept. 24 in Sunset Center Theater.

After the Thursday night occasion, the four-character play will log six more performances during the festival which runs through Oct. 4.

The Michigan team of Arnold Johnson and Deborah Ann Percy won $1,000 when local and experienced play readers judged their script the best of this year's entries. Carmel Cultural Director Brian Donoghue directs a sturdy cast: Mary-Ann Lucido, Hansford Prince, Sandy Sidener, Chuck Thurman.

Readings of the two finalist scripts will be held at the same venue on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 29-30. After each reading will come an open critique chaired by Dan Gotch, GroveMont Theater dramaturg and development chief who's producing the sessions.

The audience is invited to join actors, directors and a panel including Lee Brady, Barbara Rose Shuler, True Boardman, John Rousseau and other theater persons in discussion. Those shows are The American Banner: The Blacks and the Irish by James Hatch and William Beard of New York City; Home to Monticello by Oregon writer James Crowell.

"We've changed the festival format this year," Donoghue said, "and scheduled all the activities within a 10-day block. Zamboni will be performed in the Sunset Theater, but the stage will be transformed into a small studio and the audience will be seated on risers right next to the action. I'm particularly pleased that we can manage this change technically because the play needs an intimate space."

Along with Donoghue the production staff includes set designer Charles Houghton, technical director and lighting designer Ron Shwedel, sound/video designer Mark Collins, costume designer Constance Gamere, props designer Nancy Oppenhuizen, stage manager Harriet Anne Catania, master carpenter Craig Dunbar and master electrician Paul Cain.

Zamboni tickets cost $5 apiece and will be available at the door. The readings are free and, of course, public. Information: 624-3996.

Here's the full schedule for the 1992 Festival of Firsts:

- Sept. 24-25-26 at 8 p.m. — Zamboni show.
- Sept. 27 at 2 p.m. — Zamboni show.
- Sept. 29 at 7 p.m. — The American Banner under Sheryl Bailey's direction.
- Sept. 30 at 7 p.m. — Home to Monticello under Lee Brady's hand.
- Oct. 2-3 at 8 p.m. — Zamboni show.
- Oct. 4 at 2 p.m. — Zamboni show.

Valley

On Friday night, Oct. 2, Hidden Valley's latest series will host actor David Ponting in his one-man show about a great poet. Title: Dylan Thomas — The Man and the Myth.

In this week's announcement it was stated that the offering "takes the audience from the cradle to grave in a sympathetic yet realistic look at a controversial life."

The production has been seen on British and American television and throughout Great Britain and The Continent. It's currently on a United States tour.

The performance will begin at 8 p.m. in the Hidden Valley Theater, 11.2 miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. For ticket prices and reservations, call 659-3115.

Award winner

Looking ahead once more, MPC Theater Company will present the Tony Award winning drama M. Butterfly in the college's Main Stage Theater Oct. 15-Nov. 1.

Playwright David Henry Hwang won other major honors for this tale of a French diplomat who falls in love with a Chinese diva, only to learn that she is a spy for her government. The play's based on a true story which resulted in a 1986 trial and conviction of a former diplomat and Chinese opera singer on spy charges.

Ramie Wikdahl directs the MPC show which features Patrick McEvoy as the diplomat and F. Tengonciang as Song

Ling. Also in the cast: Harrison Shields, Camille Belsher, Nita Raichart, John Newkirk and Karen Uemura.

Following a $3 preview on Oct. 14 and the Thursday night opening Oct. 15, M. Butterfly will play at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 2 p.m. Sundays.

Reservations may be made via the MPC box office (646-4213) or Monterey County Theater Alliance (655-3200). Admission is $12 general or $9 for students, seniors, military.

All tickets are $9 when purchased through MCTA prior to opening night.

Re: women

The American Dame will be opened by Staff Players Repertory Company on Friday night, Sept. 25, at Steinbeck Forum of Monterey Conference Center.

SPRC spokespersons call the show "a shrewd and accurate look at how America's women got where they are today. It's a brilliant script, put together by Phillip Lewis from authentic sources — Colonial days to the present. There's lots of humor, anguish and the iron determination of our foremothers."

The production schedule covers three weekends — Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. with one Saturday matinee. Tickets cost $10 general (or $8 for seniors and students) and seating's open.

Call SPRC at 624-1531 for additional information.

Art review: Hermitage Group brings strength from afar

By WILLIAM MINOR

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The reviewer is a painter, jazz critic and teacher at Monterey Peninsula College. He recently finished a superb book about an extended tour through the former Soviet Union.)

IT'S ONE of many bitter ironies of history that a nation which offered the world the artistic innovations of Kandinsky, Tatlin, Malevich, Rodchenko, Chagall, Goncharova and Filonov should be forced to endure so many years of creative somnambulism during the "officially administered norms" of Socialist Realism. Yet it is also one of the miracles of history that the urge to make genuine art stayed alive, intact—as witnessed by eight St. Petersburg artists currently on exhibit at the Ludwa Studio in Carmel (off San Carlos, between Sixth and Fifth) and in McCone Hall at the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

United

These artists—called the Hermitage Group (from their long tutelage at that great storehouse of visual art: what they call "an intact temple") are united by the influence, and shared credo, of a mentor: Grigory Yakovlevich Dlugach (1908-1988). Americans tend to get impatient with large doses of aesthetic theory, but not the Russians (I noticed this passion for manifestos even among jazz musicians, when I interviewed the latter on a summer 1990 journey through the former USSR), and Dlugach's ideas take form in both the work and statements of these eight artists.

Given an artistic credo that emphasizes a vibrant "living" canvas, American viewers may, at first, be set back by the dark, brooding, minor key aspect of much of this work. The coloration—a legacy of artists unfortunately not well known in the West, such as Mikhail Vrubel and the fine landscape painter Levitan—runs to basso browns, baritone greens, stark grey and rankling violet; yet for all its somber intentionality, this work is anything but static: Dlugach's belief that the "mystery of space" could turn the plane of a canvas into a "poetic text," where every point and line is a "symbol-shape," adhered to with a vengeance.

The MIIS McCone Hall show (Sept. 10-25) contains a striking collective portrait,

Wayfarer Series announced

THE FAMILIAR Music at the Wayfarer Concert Series — Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer, of course — will present World Class organists. Names were announced this week.

The series features the church's new 32-rank Schoenstein pipe organ.

A six-foot TV screen in the chancel area will give a good view of the artists from all seat locations. Concerts will be at 8 p.m. on the Fridays:

- Oct. 23 — Dr. James Welch will conduct a musical tour around the world, interpreting composers from 10 different countries.

- Jan. 22 of next year — Thomas Murray, music professor and university organist at Yale, specializes in music of the Romantic period.

- March 19 — Dr. William Osborne heads the Music Department at Ohio's Denison University. He is an authority on American music.

- May 7 — David Higgs has drawn rave reviews from difficult critics. He also will conduct a Master Class at the church on Saturday morning, May 8. Reservations: 624-3550.

Ensemble Monterey, which offered its debut concert in early February, will return Saturday evening with a second program of work by little-known masters.

The 8 p.m. event in MPC Concert Hall will introduce the writing of Franz Krommer, Emile Bernard, Charles Koechlin and Gordon Jacob to local audiences.

A consortium of working musicians, Ensemble Monterey is directed by Dr. John Anderson. He founded the group under MPC sponsorship.

Tickets ($13.50 apiece) may be reserved by calling 646-4205.

The Narnian Consort plays baroque triosonatas, traditional Celtic tunes, compositions of 18th century Irish harper Turlough O'Carolan and original fantasias.

At 8 p.m. on Saturday evening, Sept. 26, the unit will appear at Barbara Murphy's Portofino Cafe in Pacific Grove. Members: Don Lax (violin), Shelley Phillips (oboe and troubador harp), Barry Phillips (cello).

Door charge is $8 per. Reservations — 373-7379.

A recital and benefit for Monterey County AIDS Project will occur on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 27, at St. Philip Lutheran Church in Carmel. Singers will memorialize Jim Sully, popular performer in peninsula musical theater who passed away recently.

Soprano Phyllis Jean McChesney will be joined in the 3 p.m. program by Amy Washburn (mezzo soprano), Carl Palme (baritone) and David Auerbach (accompanist). Admission will be free with donations being accepted and forwarded to MCAP.

Monterey Opera Association will celebrate its fifth anniversary by presenting Opera Fest '92 — a fundraiser and kickoff of the new season. This will happen starting at 7 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, in Monterey Conference Center.

Entertainment will be provided throughout the evening by international and local singers from Monterey Opera and Nouvelle Chamber Players.

Barnyard hosts reception for new jade garden

DON WOBBER, a 65-year-old jade sculptor from Pacific Grove, will be at the Barnyard in Carmel this weekend, presenting what may be the only Monterey jade garden in the world.

Decorated with 11 raw stones and two sculptures by the adventurous artist, the Japanese-style garden will be unveiled at The Barnyard Saturday, Sept. 26, from 6-9 p.m. A champagne reception with hors d'oeuvres in the Barnyard Community Room will follow the garden tour. A lecture, slide show and video about Wobber's life and art will follow the garden tour.

Wobber, described in National Geographic as "among the best of the world's contemporary jade sculptors," has gained local notoriety locally and nationally for his jade-diving expeditions in south Monterey County.

"When I'm working at my best," said Wobber, "the stone tells me what it wants to be."

Annual Artists' Day coming up at MPC

THE THIRD Annual Monterey Bay Artists' Day will be held from 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at the Monterey Peninsula College Creative Arts Complex.

After registration for the event, Oakland-based painter Squeak Carnwath will speak on the related matters of breakthrough and overcoming obstacles.

Also covering that vital territory will be a 2 p.m. panel with sculptor Coeleen Keibert, Stanford Art Museum photography curator Joel Leivick and sculptor Sam Hernandez.

To determine the fee and other registration details, call Monterey County Cultural Council at 424-3034.

A selection of Carnwath's more recent paintings is being shown at Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art through Jan. 17 of next year.

Meanwhile, paintings by the late Charlotte Broudy — longtime Carmel resident who died of AIDS in 1991 — are being exhibited in MPMA's Entry Gallery through the same date.

In 1985, Charlotte Broudy contracted AIDS from HIV-contaminated blood which she received during the course of surgery. She became an important lecturer and spokesperson for Monterey County AIDS Project, which donated one of Broudy's works to the MPMA permanent collection and made other pictures available to this special show.

"Broudy's main focus was the human face and figure," according to MPMA program notes, "prepared without preliminary sketches or photographs. The hauntingly naive quality of her work belies the despair of her physical handicap while underscoring the relationships that inspired her to evoke personal images...."

The exhibition was planned to coincide with the annual Day Without Art observance, Dec. 1, in memory of the many artistic talents who have been lost through AIDS.

Seascape riches

Carmel's Simic/New Renaissance Galleries (San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth) announces a special event from 5-8:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26.

That's the time of commencement for the venue's 11th annual Seascape Exhibit and Best of Show competition.

Says the announcement: "We'll proudly honor many of our distinguished artists who are creating new works especially for the occasion. The competition will cover all art categories with awards being presented to the artists."

Simic/New Renaissance represents more than 130 painters and sculptors from all over the world. Information: 624-7522.

Center offering

THE CENTER for Photographic Art at Carmel's Sunset Complex now presents its annual Juried Exhibition through Oct. 30. It's recent work by artists from throughout this country, using all types of photographic media creatively.

Kelly's time

CARMEL FOUNDATION has chosen Raymond Kelly as its artist for October. His color photographs of Alaska will be shown in the Hallway Gallery (Lincoln and Eighth). Hours: 9-5 weekdays and 1-4 weekends.

Renaissance man

WESTON GALLERY (on Sixth between Dolores and Lincoln in Carmel) will present an exhibition of Rosario Mazzeo's photographic work. A reception for the artist will be held from 5-7 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26, with the show staying up for a month.

Since 1938, Mazzeo has traveled and photographed in some 60 countries around the world. He has been a resident of the Carmel area for the past quarter century.

A member of the Boston Symphony from 1933-66 and a bass clarinetist from 1939, Mazzeo also is an author, ornithologist, inventor of the Mazzeo System Clarinet, educator.

Dolls, dolls....

THE CARMEL Doll and Toy Study Group will sponsor an antique doll show and sale on Saturday, Oct. 3, it was announced this week.

Tickets will be available at the door of Serra Ballroom in Monterey Conference Center. Cost for two morning lectures and early admission to the noontime show — $15. Those attending the doll show only (1-5 p.m.) will pay $4 apiece.

More than 50 dealers from all over this land will offer a wide variety of miniature treasures: rare French fashion dolls, automations, discontinued Madame Alexander dolls, Steiff teddy bears, paper dolls, doll accessories, so on.

Featured speakers will be Dorothy and Evelyn Jane Coleman of Washington, D.C., among the foremost authorities on dolls.

They've written many books on their specialty and will talk about dolls in original clothing and the history of doll collecting.

Longer run

CARMEL'S DOOLEY Gallery has extended the current exhibit of Louis La Barbera collages until Oct. 4. The space sits between Fifth and Sixth in the San Carlos Mall.

He has had one-man shows in Rio and Rome as well as Los Angeles and many other California cities.

General session

THE NEXT general meeting of Central Coast Art Association will be held on Monday evening, Sept. 28, in Room 10 of Sunset Center. Teacher Robert Nissen will make a presentation about sculpture and art history.

Theater review: AIDS show staged

By JOAN SWARTZ PAONESSA

P.S. UNLIMITED Productions is presenting As Is — a play by William Hoffman — at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey. The R-rated show is produced, directed and designed by Patrick Spike, with lighting by Blaine Yeats and Annette Wecker and stage management by Sue Bear.

AIDS, the scourge of the late 20th century, is the tragic theme of this episodic piece set in New York's Greenwich Village. Through a series of adroitly conceived and executed montages and short scenes, many aspects of the disease are explored: care and treatment, lifestyles which tend to engender and perpetuate it, and its devastating effects on its victims and the people who surround them.

Central relationship

The central relationship in the play is the homosexual marriage of Saul (Sid Cato) and Rich (Christopher Heimer). Divorce, with all its pain and reverberations, is in the air for the couple when they learn that one of them has fallen prey to an AIDS-related illness. In rediscovering God on a New York City sidewalk, Saul experiences the redemption which gives him the strength to breathe new hope and spirit into his own life, and that of his dying friend.

Style and pacing are everything here, and Director Spike has contrived things accordingly. Minimalist black and white set, harsh red lighting, and sharp and stilted line readings all convey a sense of alienation and a heightened theatricality which, while clever, serve to keep the onlooker at a distance. A playwright's mission, after all, must be to engage his audience, and Hoffman does so only sporadically.

Intensity not always the key

In a theater of this size and configuration, less is more, and intensity is not always the key to reality. Dropping his emotional pitch several notches below the prevailing tone, Cato creates the play's most affecting and gripping moments in his final scenes with Heimer, who interacts with him in a correspondingly genuine manner.

Concentric circles of concern include the duo's families and friends, and the caregivers who support them in their ordeal. The talented ensemble comprises Lyn Whiting as the Hospice Worker, and in multiple roles, Alana Brown, Chip Clark, Donovan Dolan, Olga Legan and David McMillan. They are all effective within the limitations imposed on them by the stylized construction of the piece.

As Is plays Thursday-Sunday evenings through Sept. 26, with tickets handled by PS Unlimited at 649-0976. (And $1 of each admission ticket goes to help the Monterey County AIDS Project, a cause worthy of everyone's support.)

Autumn

HIDDEN VALLEY Music Seminars will open its autumntime series with jazz. Booked in at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 25 — alto saxist Richie Cole, vocalist Madeline Eastman, drummer Vince Lateano fronting a trio.

Richie was inspired in boyhood by Bird Parker. After studying with Charlie Mariano and Phil Woods, he entered the woodshed and developed his now-famous Alto Madness tack.

Tickets will be available at the door. Proceeds benefit Hidden Valley youth programs. Call 659-3115 if you wish additional data.

(On Nov. 20, the venue will bring back the "chamber jazz duo" of Red Mitchell on bass and pianist Roger Kellaway.)

ABINANTE MUSIC in downtown Monterey will offer a public Drum Clinic from 7-9 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 30. On hand will be Paul van Wageningen out of Andy Narell's band and Karl Perratz from Santana.

Tickets cost $10 per and are available at the venerable shop — 425 Alvarado. There also will be a special private equipment sale for those attending the clinic. Drumstick bargains may be had all month. (In fact, those buying advance tickets will get a free pair of sticks along with a $5 gift certificate.)

ANOTHER MARSALIS brother — trombonist Delfeayo — will lead his group into Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz on Monday evening (9/28). Eight o'clock kick; $13 advance (Ticketmaster) or $15 at the door.

Delfeayo has won a solid reputation as a session producer. Now he's on the road promoting his own RCA/Novus album entitled Pontius Pilate's Decision.

THE FOLLOWING report's style pays respects to the late jazz critic Ralph Gleason, who helped Jimmy Lyons develop the Monterey Jazz Festival vision and then used print impressionism in covering MJF.

Some glimpses, snippets and true tales from the 1992 edition:

• The air of clarity which permeated arena, backstage area, verbal and harmonic conversations. It must be a reflection of new GM Tim Jackson's character: MJF already has changed from booze-centered to music-centered organism.

• The shallow article last Sunday by Charles Davis of the Monterey daily paper. He proposed "the not very confidential fact that the (fest board) forced Lyons into retirement. It's been a messy affair...." Jimmy requested the retirement process after his ulcers blew, then changed his mind when that process already had hit high gear. The full story contains some human tragedy; I'll not undercut the Lyons legacy or spatter anyone's blood across this page. Point: Davis was short on homework and long on easy answers.

• Jimmy weeping at the end. He went out with dignity and honest emotion. To the Sunday night arena crowd: "No commercials — just thanks and God love you."

• The honesty and humility of trumpeter Wallace Roney (from the Miles Davis Tribute unit) when we spoke about Miles apparently passing on the mantle when the two appeared together at Montreux. "My playing owes him everything. (The Montreux) relationship happened and he died. It happened; then he was dead. I can't enjoy it because it was all so weird."

• From a little distance, Wallace resembles the young Miles. One could experience Davis seeing himself in the other man.

• Supervisor Sam Karas, an original MJF trustee who spoke at the Spanish Bay luncheon for Jimmy, revealing that the first fest achieved a civil rights breakthrough. "We got agreements from the hotels and motels. That cracked the color barrier."

And original trustee Lewis Fenton regarding the maiden voyage: "We were so inexperienced that Billie Holiday got paid twice. I was told to go get the money back from her. Of course, I failed."

• Pianist Marc Carey of the Roy Hargrove group. He looks and sounds like a cross between Bud Powell and Cecil Taylor. "I love all the piano players who came before me," he said — "especially Bud and Monk and Herbie (Hancock)."

• What was bothering Tony Williams? While his Davis Tribute bandmates wove fascinating harmonies at various tempos, Tony locked his drums into one approach: thrash and crash.

• Cuban trumpeter Arturo Sandoval's airline mixup. He never showed. Tim Jackson walked through his first crisis without missing a beat or blowing his cool.

• A young lion for sure: Drummer Mike Baker of the Billy Childs Quintet. Power, technique, deep affection and respect when the older artists came by.

• Superstar Wynton Marsalis playing a strong but not particularly spotlighted role in Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra's trumpet section. He looked happily at peace with himself, the Ellington book and Conductor David Berger (class act). What a gang: Britt Woodman, Norris Turney, Sir Roland Hanna, Lew Soloff, Bill Easley. Turney's personal tribute to Johnny Hodges was inspired.

• MJF Board Prexy Doc Etienne meeting obligations despite a case of walking pneumonia.

• Reactions of the young lions to one promising player's unsecret use of heroin. Sadness, anger, putdown time. The new generation's commitment to jazz as an art form makes no room for the outworn death trip.

• How fine to see Dizzy up and about. He looked tired and a whole lot thinner, but he made it to old pal Jimmy's last hurrah with charisma intact. What a genuinely great human being.

• Trumpet genius Jon Faddis rehearsing the MJF High School All-Stars with humor and seemingly endless patience. PG High's David Krimsley (trumpet section) may have been awed. Yet he stood in there and asked hard questions until he had the answers one particular chart required.

• Teen trumpeter Tanya Darby from Monterey High. Jon dug her work so much that he called her down front twice for Sunday afternoon arena solos. And they played duet measures on Dizzy classics.

• The utter sharpness (fashionwise as well as musical) of Milt Jackson and Percy Heath.

• Chicago guitarist Buddy Guy firing up the Saturday blues afternoon with a long walling romp through the arena throng. The man works for his money.

• Extraordinary pianist Cyrus Chestnut (behind Betty Carter) saying he'll go on the road with his own trio next year. Betty was girlish in flowered skirt and summer straw hat; she preferred ballads to the hard bopping this time.

• Ron Carter about the Davis Tribute schedule: "The tour has been good to me. The travel's tiring. The camaraderie in this band makes the travel less tiring. It's not the notes — it's the people."

• Darlene Chan of Playboy Jazz Fest telling jazz photographer Will Wallace she was delighted to have his work in her private at-home collection.

• Fairway action: the tall blond man in bright green, huge top hat. Children riding parental shoulders, asleep in parental arms.

• Clint Eastwood and his ladylove being very patient with a pushy (read it tipsy) autograph-seeker.

• Faddis singing along backstage to the Lincoln Center gang's opening of Duke Ellington's Black and Tan Fantasy. Betty Carter hugging and kissing long-time friends in that orchestra — "How many years has it been? How many years?"

• GM/Program Director Tim Hodges of KJAZ Radio revealing that veteran broadcaster Bob Parlocha has been appointed assistant PD. "Bob gradually will take on the whole job," Hodges said.

Hermitage Group impresses

"Before the Camera," by Vladimir Kagaviltsky: a host of school children with anonymous faces (slashes for eyes, no mouths on some), a hunched, defeated teacher at their center while an avuncular Stalin, holding a smiling child, leers from a banner above. While Kagaviltsky's "Artist, Model and Biblical Figure" also holds to somber color (in spite of its vermillion enhanced imploring icon figure), Aleksander Daniel's "Alley" is luminous with ice and ultra marine blue; and Albert Bakun's oil "Spring" dances with ornamental rhythms (a tangled interplay of arabesques), complex surface texture and pattern, radiant yellow among the solemn green.

This painting, and Mark Tumin's "Musician" (a geometricized clarinetist with fool's cap gold headdress), bear out Dlugach's theory of "deformation:" individual artistic components in conflict with the whole, a "desire for constant amazement in the visual world"—very reminiscent of literary critic Viktor Shklovsky's notion of ostranenie: "de-familiarization," destroying the habitual logic of associations so we may not just "recognize" but truly "see" our world.

At the Ludwa Studio exhibition in Carmel, Boris Golovachev's series "Bridges and Walls" de-familiarizes and re-forms the angularity of St. Petersburg's Neva embankment and canals by way of unusual (and multiple) perspective; just as Vladimir Obatnin's "Patriarch" does the suggestion of a face—ear and haunted eyes—leaping from a flat brown graphic plane; contour lines in such works taking on a life of their own, a "personal relation to the space," in artist Golovachev's words. Another important Dlugach tenet is that of kamen, or "stone" as plastic integrity and wholeness, the "metaphysical basis of entirety:" again very reminiscent of the Acmeist theories of poet Osip Mandelstam and, since Dlugach was just five years old when Mandelstam's first book—called Stone—came out, I'm assuming the poet got there first; "separate" arts interdependent in Russian cultural life to a degree not known here. Kamen is illustrated by way of Bakun's "Yaroslavl" (greens and grays and severe geometry); the same artist's nearly architectural seascape (solid cubist clouds dominating, weighing down the sky above diminutive sailboats); the light airy surface of Yuri Gusev's "Gloomy Day;" Sergey Daniel's lyrical parkway landscape; and Alexander Daniel's crisp expressionist linotypes.

Still a group

The artists—independent as they are—apparently still do function as a group (enjoying the "collective scholarship" they apparently with Dlugach for twenty years), for, rather than savor the more obvious lures of Carmel, they rose each morning at 6 a.m., while here, and set out to do oil sketches of the local terrain: Yuri Gusev the most prolific with his noodle-like loops of color and line, sheath-wet tendrils gasping for air. One wall at the Ludwa Gallery is devoted to the Hermitage Group's "Tribute to Carmel:" Sergey Daniel offering a rarefied open view of California's "golden" (in this case, beige) hills, shunting, jostling planes of earth and sky exploding with centrifugal force (as a number of the group's landscapes do); both Alexander Daniel and Mark Tunin painting "Pfeiffer Beach" (the former's open and inviting; the latter's crystallized with vermillion and sea-green rock). Bakun presents a bright, busy, spacious view of "San Jose Canyon:" the whole angular, mobile, energetic, testifying to the Russian love of both ornament and motion.

The Ludwa Studio show will run through Oct. 12: an engaging testament itself to the tenacity and dedication of a group of eight St. Petersburg artists who outdistanced the Soviet Union's (an old joke) "unpredictable past." In the words of Vladimir Obatnin: "Painting bestows on one the opportunity for the survival of true, honest integrity, and the artistic works bear the traces of this survival." Dobro pozhalovat, Hermitage Group. Welcome to the Monterey Peninsula!

BOOKS, ETC.

Britannica LEARNING CENTER formerly The Reading Game

Blaming only makes the pain go deeper. A youngster's lackluster school performance may stem from a social bind (peer pressure) or lack of confidence that fulfills its own sad prophecy. Whatever the cause, Britannica Learning Center evaluates the struggle and replies via compassionate, time-tested programs in both reading and math. On average, a 48-hour instructional plan means a full year's academic growth.

Britannica Center sets realistic goals that then are practiced a few hours per week. The atmosphere, methods and special incentives can turn previously hated studies into attractive times. (The same approach works for advancement-seeking adults too!)

One call can change lives: 372-2090. Convenient Monterey location: 200 Camino Aquajito...Suite 201. Keeping the promise since 1970.

CARMEL BOOK EMPORIUM

This fine bookshop emphasizes high quality and 60 sections (ultimately 100) and a big stone fireplace round which folks may browse contentedly. Management promises computerized ordering that assures "the best possible turnaround time."

Special attention is given to mysteries, creative writing, the lively arts - and of course the tops in contemporary fiction. Videos include such special contexts as Oscar-winning Best Pictures over the past 20 years. And PBS productions. And music tapes and CDs (local players too). Before long, Carmel Book Emporium will add a cafe - perfect meeting spot.

On Lobos Lane in The Crossroads (a few steps from Safeway). Open 10-6 Sunday/Thursday; 10-8 Friday/Saturday. 626-BOOK.

MONTEREY BAY COFFEEHOUSE BOOKSHOP

Opened by Estelle Cimino in November 1991, this downtown spot (472 Alvarado St.) has an airy and bright atmosphere that seems made for book lovers. "I've had a passion for books ever since I was a child," Estelle comments. Her caring can be seen in the full children's section, Arts, Self-Help, Business, Spirituality .....dozens of well-stocked categories. And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. For-sale music CD's and cassettes provide a soothing and relaxing background. Computerized ordering. Magazines galore. Ample parking in rear lot. Hours: 9-10 Monday-Thursday; 9-10:30 Friday, Saturday. And 10-8 Sunday. 647-1822.

Gridiron nostalgia

The Big Game. Compiled by Peter Macfarlane for an 8-1/2x11" softcover edition. Pisces Publishing (PO Box 660, Denair CA 95316). Or (209) 632-6419. 113-page picture book. $12.95 postpaid. It also may be ordered through your favorite local bookstore.

AND SO it's autumn with this area's celebrated clarity in the air. In the air as well: footballs and wild cheers.

This's a good time to discuss the book at hand. Sports nostalgia buffs couldn't ask for more appropriate material.

Publisher Macfarlane brings back the grand cartoons done by Wiley Smith at Big Game time (Cal/Berkeley versus Stanford) for the San Francisco Examiner. The period covered — 1936-65.

Macfarlane says he had worked 15 years on a job "that seemed to be going nowhere." One time in the shower, he remembered how he and his brother raced streetward on boyhood mornings to see how Smith would depict the latest annual clash of gridiron foes. He went through all the necessary steps and became distributor of these Wiley Classics.

Each contest gets the full treatment. We see Smith's pre-game drawing, the cartoon inspired by the final score, season-to-date, lineups, betting line, date, place, weather, scoring summary and score by quarters plus even a bit of news coverage lifted from the daily papers.

Ax on high

There's one quibble: Smith drew the Stanford Indian (as opposed to The Cardinal of today) in some unflattering poses. Getting drunk on firewater, for instance, and coming after that Cal Bear with an ax. If one considers the times which produced the drawings, perhaps political correctness shan't be too shrill an issue here. The Bear gets some pie-in-the-face and drop-through-the-trap-door treatment too — equal treatment under the visual satirist's laws.

Wiley Smith took the football rivalry very seriously indeed. The detail and imagination observable in every single frame show how hard he worked on this material. If the humor seems broad and dated, realize that kids of all ages really did run for the paper and turn first to his latest Big Game cartoon.

And the memories evoked by each meeting — my gosh. Turning at random to 1951, I find the names Les Richter and Matt Hazeltine (for Cal) and (on the other side) "Boy Coach" Chuck Taylor guiding fullback Bob Mathias and Bill McCall at right end. True giants.

You'll surely locate your own gems. The selection's well worth having. Now, let's allow Wiley's pen to make its own statements:

Free time notebook: art show, mystery writers, strings

By JOHN DETRO

CARMEL PAINTER Claude Phillip Cirimele has a small and admirable show at Pacific Grove's Portofino Coffee House through Sept. 30.

The 10 titles reflect technical confidence, conceptual stability and a happy absence of painterly pomp — Cirimele simply did what he said he would do.

This current series carries the rubric Archaeology in Time and the artist's written statement declares: "My work deals with the effects of time on a painted surface...The paintings are...snapshots from the mind. My references are historic and archaeological."

When he lists his latest influences as Anselm Kiefer, Albert Pinkham Ryder and "Roman wall paintings," the guess rises that this fellow will make something outside of the ordinary. It's to his credit, not the reviewer's, that the guess holds up as one looks and looks.

Within the exhibit's modest dimensions, Cirimele manages an impressive spectrum of non-objective, microcosmic histories. We get leaping suns, darkly bright movement (perhaps time as Spirit trapped by dusky rooms), surfaces blistered and buffed, wintry refractions which snag interest like one face multiplied by broken ice. Sun = buried seed = blotch on some unsayably ancient building.

Such rapid transmutation of focal points — back and forth, forth and back — indicates that this man has been poetized by history rather than locked up inside linear thought.

Each painting contains a surge: footprints, history on the upswing, the Roman wall as screen where even somber scars have beauty and stasis does not dwell. His point's well-made and might be served even better by a series which looked at one square foot of one surface and moved it through two, three, seven, nine centuries.

The painted surface can bear sameness no better than Cirimele and you and I. That flat place somehow becomes an alchemist's lab filled with organic, textured impulses. I wouldn't be surprised if he sees history not as memory and language, but as an animal always hungry for more of its own going.

His archaeology moves up and out at the same instant it digs in and down. And it's packed.

THREE NOTED mystery writers will give talks and sign their works for 90 minutes starting at noon Thursday, Sept. 24, at Brentano's Bookstore of Carmel Plaza.

Then and there, it was reported, the Lethal Ladies Tour — Joan Hess, Dorothy Cannell, Diane Davidson — will be armed with brownies made from a recipe in Dying for Chocolate by Davidson.

For more information, call Donna Huntington at 624-6289.

CARMEL ART Association will offer a program performed by Monterey String Quartet on Thursday evening, Sept. 24, at the CAA space (between Fifth and Sixth on Dolores).

The musical event starts at 7 p.m.

Quartet members — David Dally (violin), Patricia Boggs (violin), Carolyn Ramsey (viola), Margie Dally (cello) — will render works by Bach, Mozart and Schubert.

THE ONE-WOMAN show Shirley Valentine (starring Rosamond Goodrich) closes with a matinee at 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 27, at Carmel's Cherry Foundation.

The Willy Russell play also will be offered on the preceding Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Shirley's a bored and dowdy British housewife who blossoms during a trip to Greece. Director: Nick Zanides.

For ticket reservations, call Monterey County Theater Alliance at 655-3200.

A CREATIVE Writing Workshop for those at all levels of expertise will be held from 1-4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at Sunset Center.

For fee and registration information, call 373-4144.

During the session, two professional writers (and teachers of the art as well) will cover time transitions, using the senses, metaphors and similes, importance of details, creating realistic settings, developing dramatic scenes. They are Martha Clark Cummings and Lisa Vice, recent arrivals on the peninsula.

Cummings, a professor at Monterey Institute of International Studies, has won fellowships and awards for her writing. The same is true of Vice.
